*A thing there is whose voice is one,
Whose feet are two and four and three.
So mutable a thing is none
That moves in earth or sky or sea.
When on most feet this thing doth go
Its strength is weakest and its pace most slow.*

My Plan

I am a senior at The Master's College studying mathematics with a planned minor in computer science. I have been an art major, then to philosophy, and have arrived at the rich field of mathematics. To be honest, math has shown itself to be both an art and a philosophy, plus much more.

My current interests lie in the philosophy of mathematics, philosophy of science, and current issues in scientific epistemology. I plan to go on to graduate school right away studying to go on to graduate school right away studying philosophy. I would like to do research in the logic and methodology of scientific methods, including ethical issues in biomedical research.
